But hey, we got a day and a half of this one! And I got to sleep in for two whole mornings. Too bad

I'm very grateful to be in the middle of a rainstorm in California.
Stay safe and warm.

It's kind of... fun. You don't feel guilty about the hot cocoa and rum calories after you shovel for a while.

I understand the airport started shutting down on Friday AM. Or at least they were delaying my CFO's flight to you. She's not going to make her Monday meeting on the East coast.

It's all closed. It's so quiet out there. I live in DC proper (a pretty nice bit of DC proper) and it's NEVER quiet out there. But you could hear the snow squeak under the feet of a running mouse, if it weren't seventeen mice deep.

I'd ask if the rest of us are invited to the slumber party, but I lack the snowshoes to get there. Yikes.
Have a good time staying warm! :)

I invited everyone I knew to come over and bring food and Monopoly boards (T. informs me that the local variant in her home state is called Vermont Monopoly. You need four boards, which you put together corner to corner, and you can't build on anything until you have ALL of that color on all four boards.) but surprisingly??? there were very few takers. But we've been having fun teasing the fluffy bunny with snow and staying up late consuming too much alcohol anyway.

Well, it's not like anybody is DRIVING.

Now that is snow what means it. Not going anywhere for a while... check. Supplies to ensure you won't miss it... check. Hang in there.

Shovels and rakes and implements of destruction, check.

We're keeping ahead of it (shoveling every two hours, like feeding a newborn) but wow.

Well, you're all set then.

Remember if necessary you can huddle together for warmth.

And if it it's not totally necessary, of course. ^_^

We have a Mammal Pile in the conversation pit and a lot of DVDs.

Also, this is the sort of situation for which marshmallow toasting in front of the gas fire was invented.

And hey, now you know how to make more home-made marshmallows when these are all gone!

(Thanks for the snow party. I have never slept under a bunny before. Think the plows will reach us by March?)
